

TPCDT organises clothes and toy donation drive for the underprivileged in Mumbai

- Mumbai, January 12, 2016

Tata Power Community Development Trust (TPCDT), in partnership with the NGO 'Goonj', volunteered to extend its support to the underprivileged children and adults by organising a clothes donation drive.

The objective of this initiative was to spread happiness and joy by reaching out to the needy children and adults. The initiative encouraged and enabled employee volunteering by bringing people together for a good cause and create a wave of change. Volunteers from Tata Power donated generously both new and old clothes, in addition to toys and handed over to GOONJ. The Nodal and Zonal heads of Tata Power graced the occasion.

Speaking on the initiative Mr. Ashok Sethi, COO & Executive Director, Tata Power said; "Tata Power constantly works towards the wellbeing and development of its community. In line with this philosophy, we once again encouraged our employees to donate clothes and toys for the less fortunate people. We thank GOONJ, for their support in this initiative. I would also like to thank all the employees and volunteers who generously donated and helped to bring smile across many faces"

The initiative came as a part of 'Daan Utsav, the Joy of Giving'. TPCDT believes that such programmes better the lives of people in more ways than one. The Company always undertakes projects that help its communities take the highway to development, and the Company will continue to initiate similar endeavours in the future.
